 SILVER

Higher awards require an Aviation specific course or a standard First Aid with an add-on aviation section <coming soon>

HOW TO BOOK

You should be able to find First Aid training locally. We recommend you check first with the main First Aid bodies like St John's Ambulance, St Andrew's & Red Cross. Local Ambulance services also often run courses.

COSTS

Costs will vary by provider.

It can often be cost effective to host a course within your flying school or club.

OBJECTIVE

The aim is to equip pilots with the basic First Aid skills

BACKGROUND

The skills of basic First Aid are important for the whole population, not just pilots. These skills are of benefit to the wider community and are recommended for everyone regardless of level of flying ability.

Courses which have already been completed and which meet the criteria can be used as a safety skill if completed within 24 months before the date of submission of the application for the level being applied for.

SYLLABUS

The requirement is to complete a recognized First Aid course. This could be offered as a session hosted within a school or club with suitably qualified external instructors or may be something which you complete within the course of your employment.

The requirement is to complete a nationally recognized First Aid course of a minimum of 8 hours duration. Courses should be in person; online training does not meet the criteria. Examples include: St John's Ambulance, St Andrew's First Aid or Red Cross Emergency First Aid (1 day) or equivalent First Aid at Work awards. Equivalent awards from other providers are also accepted.

National governing body awards in Emergency First Aid from other sports are also suitable e.g. British Canoeing Aquatic First Aid (8 hrs or greater). Please send course outline to show 8hr requirement has been met
